THE METRIC SCALE FOR MEASURING COINS.

The new metric scale for measuring coins is divided into millimeters. These are the thousandths of a meter (the international unit of length, now legalized in this country), as the centimeter is the hundredth and the decimeter the tenth. It is, therefore, a decimal scale, and as the numbers of the sizes correspond with the numbers of the millimeters, the size of a coin is the number of millimeters in its diameter.

All countries using the metric system measure the diameters of their coins in millimeters, so that the use of this scale will place us in conformity with the rest of the world. It is so superior to the old scale of sixteenths of an inch that it is hoped its adoption will not be far distant.

By permission, we publish without comments the following extracts from letters of a distinguished American numismatist :

BOSTON, May 13, 1878.

ED. FROSSARD, Esq.—My dear sir :

I have received the numbers of NUMISMA, and am much pleased with them. I note in the different articles in the last number several errors of statement, which, I doubt not, you will be very glad to have pointed out.

The Immunis Columbia referred to (page 6) was made by Mr. B., and sold May, 1864. (See his catalogue No. 13.) I am surprised that some New York collector did not discover and expose the thing the moment it appeared.

The Penn seal was rescued by Dr. F. S. Edwards from the melting-pot in England, and whatever he may have said as to what he paid for it, he really gave very little. The Doctor, as is well known in New York, made a small amount of truth go a great ways. He never wasted any. I bought the seal of him for $35, kept it for many years, and sold it February 26th, 1874, for $16. *

* Concerning Mr. Mickley's collection, it is about time to state facts. When he was robbed he really lost very little, comparatively speaking. Instead of half his collection, the loss was less than one tenth.

My facts are in the first place derived directly from him, and corroborated by no small familiarity with his collection when complete, and my ownership of all that was left after the theft took place. * * *

The robbery at Mr. Mickley's occurred in this wise. Some person, who was evidently acquainted with Mr. M.'s house and ways, got into his house, went up to a front chamber where his coins were kept on sheets of pasteboard, which were placed one above another in a square box. He hastily pulled off a pillow case in the room and tumbled into it the principal contents of about four of the sheets of pasteboard, selecting apparently the heaviest pieces of silver, such as the English pound pieces, the heaviest German crowns, and large French coins. Then stepping to the rear room adjoining, threw into the area a pair of old shoes, and while the attention of Mr. Mickley and his housekeeper was thus attracted, the thief slipped down the front stairs and into the street. Mr. Mickley's collection must have weighed nearly a quarter of a ton. All of the American portion was saved, being at the time in another room, and of the foreign part, as the catalogue will show, many entire series were untouched. To those who know, the statement that Mr. Mickley lost nearly half his coins by the robbery is simply laughable. It was a terrible loss to him, but he never sought to magnify it. * *

I have never written anything of any importance on the subject of Numismatics. I published a little tract on Washington Memorial Medals, and I have from time to time over the signature of "W," written numerous articles for the Historical Magazine, the Numismatic Journal, and for many of the newspapers. These articles, if gathered, would form a volume, but I have entirely lost the run of them, and do not even know in what papers they appeared. They are scattered all along from Maine to Illinois, but I suspect that none of them are of much account. [This we take exception to.—Ed.]

I have just purchased what I believe is the largest and finest collection of American medals known. I shall offer them by auction in New York early in October.

Yours very truly,

W.

COIN SALES.

Mr. Randall, our readers will remember, was the gentleman whose good fortune in discovering large lots of uncirculated cents of the dates 1817, '18, and '19, gave rise to the unfounded report that these dates of cents were being counterfeited. In the sale, several remaining lots of the date 1818, bright and uncirculated, sold at the fair average of $7 per hundred.

Catalogue of several small collections of American and foreign silver and copper coins, Continental paper money, etc.; 870 lots; sold at Clinton Hall, N. Y., on the 17th, 18th and 19th ult. Catalogue by Mr. T. R. Strobbridge.

Catalogue of gold, silver and copper coins and medals, together with sutler's cards, paper money, and an interesting assortment of Numismatic books, some very rare; 904 lots; sold by Messrs. Bangs & Co., 656 Broadway, New York, on the 27th and 28th ult. Compiled by Ed. Cogan, Esq.

WE have received the catalogue of a collection of fine and rare United States stamps, the property of Mr. E. B. Sterling, sold at auction in New York by Bangs & Co., 656 Broadway, on the evening of the 25th ulto., catalogued by Mr. Wm. P. Brown.

NEW PUBLICATIONS, REVIEWS, &c.

J. B. Loubat, L.L.D. The Medallie History of the United States of America. New York, 1878. 2 vols. 4to. With Plates. Privately printed.

This sumptuous and valuable book is the product of a rare combination of taste, enthusiasm, industry and opportunities. Mr. Loubat has pursued his fascinating study with the untiring zeal of a devoted collector, and arranged the results with the tact and system of an accomplished historian. Our national mint medals number eighty-six in all, from the first struck in honor of General Washington to commemorate the capture of Boston in 1776, down to the life-saving medal awarded to John Horn, of Detroit, by authority of the Act of June 20, 1874. Seventeen belong to the War of the Revolution, twenty-seven to the war of 1812, four to the Mexican war, and only two to the war of Secession, the fortunate receivers of these two distinctions being Gen. Grant and Commodore Vanderbilt. Nearly all the early medals were executed by French engravers of the highest reputation—by Augustin Dupre, who has been called "the Great Dupre," by Duvivier, Gatteaux; etc. Later works show specimens of the skill of Andrieu, Gayard, Paquet, Pembrandt, Peal, Barber [the present engraver to the U. S. Mint], and various other persons more or less famous. The engravings and designs are of all degrees of merit, from the rude and monstrous carving of the "Red Jacket Medal" to the finest example of numismatic art. Mr. Loubat arranges the medals in chronological order, and not only tells the story of each one, but gives a biographical sketch of the person honored by it, an account of the designer and a complete transcript of the official documents, report of battle, etc., which the medal was struck to commemorate. Some of these documents he tells us are now printed for the first time, and we need hardly say, that they give his work a high historical value. These descriptive and documentary pages, together with a copious introduction in which he tells us of his long, patient, and ingenious search after missing medals, and gives a narrative of the agencies of Franklin, Jefferson, Humphreys and others in procuring the preparation of American medals in Paris, make up the first of Mr. Loubat's stately volumes. The second, is devoted to the plates. Mr. Loubat has succeeded in completing the series, and the eighty six are all here, in obverse and reverse. For the mechanical execution of the work no praise can be too warm. The plates were all etched by Jules Jacquemart, and printed in Paris, by A. Salmon. The paper for the whole book, magnificent sheets of thick linen fabric, almost stout enough to stand alone, was made expressly for Loubat, by Blanchet Freres et Kleber, at Rives, France. The letter-press is the work of Francis Hart & Co., of New York, and it is gratifying to find this distinguished house associated with the foremost workmen of the old world in the production of a model of typography. Certainly their share of the labor is not inferior to the rest. More exquisite type, more elegant taste in the arrangement of the royal page, and more perfect press-work, rarely rejoices the eye of the fastidious connoisseur. Mr. Loubat deserves the cordial commendation of his countrymen for the liberality and good judgment which prompted him to clothe his valuable book in so beautiful a garb.

Mr. J. C. Brevoort writes learnedly, yet pleasantly, on the "Early Coinage in America," in the June number of the "Magazine of American History." When complete, we hope the articles will be made available to Numismatic readers by being reprinted in pamphlet form.

We have received the first numbers of the "Coin Journal," published at 10 cents per annum by Mr. Chas. Steigerwalt, at Lancaster, Pa.; also, the Curiosity Collector, erstwhile the organ of Mr. Frank D. Lusk, now revised, and in an enlarged form published by Messrs. John H. Johnson & Co., Detroit, Michigan, at 30 cents per annum.

PUZZLE DEPARTMENT.

Query in last number, Required the meaning of the vowels A. E. I. O. U. on certain German coins. Only one correct answer received, from H. C. S., N. Y., as follows. "Austriæ est imperium orbis universi," or "The whole globe is subject to Austria's power." If the gentleman will send us his name and address, we shall send him a fine German silver coin, minted 200 years ago.

Subject for this number: "Required the meaning of '17 A 86,' found on a certain thaler of Frederic the Great, and also the import attributed to this combination of letters and numbers by German Numismatists." For first correct explanation received, we shall award a fine 2d bronze Roman coin of one of the twelve Caesars.

COINS FOR SALE.

(No inferior, doubtful or spurious coins will be offered in these columns. The prices, though apparently high in some instances, are really low, if the preservation of the coins is considered. To accommodate correspondents at a distance, no orders for any of the coins advertised in this number will be filled before the 7th inst.)
